MUTINY AND MURDER.

Two Vessels Have Trouble with Their Crews at Sea.

Second Mate of the Bark Hesper

Mate of a Whaler Wounded and 13

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.-Two dories of mutiny and murder on the high seas were brought here yesterday by the steamer Australia. One mutiny occurred on the whaling bark William Boylies, which resulted in the dangerous wounding of the fourth mate, Joe Haptiste, by a sallor named Carl Hendryk. Six of the crew came up on the steamer, while thirteen are in Irons at Honolulu.

The other occurred on the American bark Hesper, which resulted in the death of the second mate. M. Flüzgerald.

The Hesper reached Honolulu Feb. 2. The Captain brought information of a plot to kill him and four others, and their lives were only saved by the ac-cidental discovery of the first murderous their lives were only saved by the accidental discovery of the first murderous move on the part of the crew.

The plot was hatched by Thomas Leciair, a sailor, who shipped as a native of Norway, but it was afterwards learned that he was born in New York, Leciair's partners were Herman Sparf, Hans Hansen, Thomas Green and Edward Larsen.

They picked a dark night, and at about 19.30 o'clock Leciair murdered the second mate with a hatchet.

Sparf and Hansen wanted to throw the body overboard, and then remove all traces of the crime by washing up the bloodstains. Leciair would not consent to this, and immediately proposed that they go after the Captain and the other marked men and murder them also.

His companions weakened, and Leciair went aft. The next day the Captain placed Leciair, Sparf and Hansen in irons, and then changed his course and made for Tahait, which was reached after a voyage of fourteen days. The mutineers confessed their crime. Cleveland this morning sent to the Senate a message withdrawing the Hawalian treaty
